

From: Tiffany Lotts
To: Comments, Public
Subject: Regulation opinion
Date: Friday, April 29, 2022 7:08:07 AM

---

WARNING: External Sender! Exercise caution with links, attachments and requests for login information.

---

I'm a retail investor and being able to trade inverse ETFs and options allows me to hedge against unforeseen market conditions and manipulation. Do we not have a free market? Everything available to large corporations, investment banks, and hedge funds should be available to everyone. These instruments are created for hedging, bottom line, doesn't matter who is buying them. Don't take away my freedom to create and protect my own wealth. If you regulate this, there will be an unprecedented outcome. It won't come without consequence and that should be a huge factor in the decision process. If you want to regulate something, make this more of a free market so that every transaction is transparent and no single entity, regardless of their buying power, has any more of an advantage than another.

Thank you for your time. I hope this opinion is taken into consideration and you make the right decision to protect our individual freedoms and free market.